How to Take Your Measurements

When taking your measurements, always use a cloth measuring tape. Remember to wear proper undergarments. If you wear a special support bra for riding, your measurements should be taken with that bra on. Also, make sure the tape measure is held snugly and firmly (not tightly) against your body and is always parallel to the floor for circumference measurements. For more accurate results, it is best to have someone else measure you. We also highly recommend measuring a finished garment you already have that fits properly and comparing those measurements to your own.

Name: _____ Date: _____

Height: _____ Weight: _____

Bust: _____

Measure around the fullest part of the bust.

Waist: _____

Measure the smallest part of the waist.

Hip: _____

The hip measurement is taken at the widest part of the hips.

Sleeve: _____

With one arm down at a slight angle, start from the corner of the shoulder and measure down to where you'd like your sleeve to end.

Shoulder Width: _____

Measure across the back from the corner of one shoulder to the corner of the other shoulder. For this measurement, I recommend measuring a jacket you already have that fits properly. Laying the jacket flat, measure from shoulder seam to shoulder seam.

Center Front Length: _____

This measurement is taken from the base of the neck down to where you would like the jacket hem to end.

Please include any other information you think will help us regarding fit (short-waisted, narrow shoulders, pear-shaped, etc...) _____
